Dividing Hispaniola: The Dominican Republic's Border Campaign Against Haiti, 1930-1961 (Pitt Latin American Series)
The island of Hispaniola is split by a border that divides the Dominican Republic and Haiti. This border has been historically contested and largely porous. Dividing Hispaniola is a study of Dominican dictator Rafael Trujillo’s scheme, during the mid-twentieth century, to create and reinforce a buffer zone on this border through the establishment of state institutions and an ideological campaign against what was considered an encroaching black, inferior, and bellicose Haitian state. The success of this program relied on convincing Dominicans that regardless of their actual color, whiteness was synonymous with Dominican cultural identity. Paulino examines the campaign against Haiti as the construct of a fractured urban intellectual minority, bolstered by international politics and U.S. imperialism. This minority included a diverse set of individuals and institutions that employed anti-Haitian rhetoric for their own benefit (i.e., sugar manufacturers and border officials.) Yet, in reality, these same actors had no interest in establishing an impermeable border. Paulino further demonstrates that Dominican attitudes of admiration and solidarity toward Haitians as well as extensive intermixture around the border region were commonplace. In sum his study argues against the notion that anti-Haitianism was part of a persistent and innate Dominican ethos.

Book Information

Series: Pitt Latin American Series
Paperback: 304 pages
Publisher: University of Pittsburgh Press; 1 edition (January 25, 2016)
Language: English
ISBN-10: 0822963795
Product Dimensions: 6 x 0.9 x 9 inches
Shipping Weight: 12.6 ounces (View shipping rates and policies)
Average Customer Review: 3.8 out of 5 stars ⊘ See all reviews (4 customer reviews)
Best Sellers Rank: #897,679 in Books (See Top 100 in Books) ⊘ #24 in ⊘ Books > History ⊘ Americas > Caribbean & West Indies > Dominican Republic ⊘ #82 in ⊘ Books > History > Americas ⊘ Caribbean & West Indies > Haiti ⊘ #817 in ⊘ Books > Politics & Social Sciences > Politics & Government > International & World Politics > Caribbean & Latin American

Customer Reviews

A well researched, situated, deeply engaging study of the Haiti-Dominican border through the ideology of the Trujillo Regime. Paulino looks at the ways in which Haiti has been portrayed and produced in the Dominican Republic. A 'must have' for any one interested in Hispaniola's history, race and borders.

I am well pleased with this text. Of course it has confirmed what I have been learning but it has also shed a light on many archival documents and testimonies that were never shared. It is a must read.

A must read for anybody against genocide. Dr. Paulino's writing is amazing, making this non-fiction as enjoyable as a fiction book but with the rigor of a well researched academic work.

Interesting information on how the Dominican - Haitian border was institutionalized. But while reading the book I felt that the author had been cognitively captured by Haitiâ€™s own state propaganda. After the 1935 border treaty, in which the Dominican Republic ceded territory to Haiti because the land was occupied by Haitian nationals, the Dominican government understood that it needed to nationalize and occupy the border in order to prevent future loss of territory. This explains most of the activities undertaken by the Dominican government to modernize the border. Every country has the right to protect it national sovereignty. Haiti should start investing and protecting their own country instead of always playing the victim.

Download to continue reading...

Imaginary: Surveying the Landscape of Race and Nation in Hispaniola (Critical Caribbean Studies)
The Dominican Republic Reader: History, Culture, Politics (The Latin America Readers) Quisqueya la Bella: Dominican Republic in Historical and Cultural Perspective (Perspectives on Latin America and the Caribbean) Cuba Under the Platt Amendment, 1902-1934 (Pitt Latin American Series) A Revolution Aborted: The Lessons of Grenada (Pitt Latin American Series) The Vigorous Core of Our Nationality: Race and Regional Identity in Northeastern Brazil (Pitt Latin American Series) For a Proper Home: Housing Rights in the Margins of Urban Chile, 1960-2010 (Pitt Latin American Series)
Myths of Harmony: Race and Republicanism during the Age of Revolution, Colombia, 1795-1831
(Pitt Latin American Series)